Balancing career and family at the University of Bern

Science in Context
 Work-life balance at the University of Bern

The University of Bern is committed to reconciling career and family

The University of Bern is most conscious of the fact that the professional and scientific careers of its students, scientists and other employees are influenced by personal circumstances. People are not only involved in their professions, but possibly also in childcare, in their partnerships, in caring for relatives and in volunteer work. The University of Bern intends to consider the context of the lives of its employees and students adequately, and is therefore committed to reconcile their careers, studies and family lives. Regular information on family-friendly offers and opportunities are issued, and employees at all levels are encouraged to make good use of them. Senior staff play a key role in this process: as the main actors at the University of Bern they will help find individual solutions, especially for employees taking care of dependants.

«The University of Bern intends to consider the context of the lives of its employees and students adequately, and is therefore committed to reconcile their careers, studies and family lives.»

The University of Bern intends to commit even more strongly to the compatibility of career and family. Signing the international Charta for a family-friendly university «Family at University» and thus joining the largest network of work-life-balanced universities in the German-speaking world is planned for 2016.

Work-life balance at the university

The University of Bern welcomes and promotes part-time work, job sharing, telecommuting and annual working time. Employees are entitled to maternity-, paternity and adoption leaves. Employees have a claim to time-out for nursing as well as protection against dismissal during pregnancy and may not be discriminated against in employment processes because of their pregnancy.

During the years of study part-time attendance, leaves, extension of the duration of studies, financial aid and the postponement of exams due to pregnancy, birth and parenthood are possible.

The regulations are recorded in the legislation of the Canton of Bern and of the University of Bern.

The University of Bern advises students in all matters concerning the compatibility of work and family and offers individual coaching and courses for employees on the subject.

Offers and opportunities for partners

The University of Bern will support and assist partners of newly arrived researchers in their professional orientation in Switzerland. Personal consulting services and, as required, counselling and coaching for job searching are on offer. These offers are meant for partners of researchers who are employed at the University of Bern as of 1 January 2016 and for at least three years, at postdoc level or above.

During the appointment and selection process all candidates will be informed of the offers for partners by the Chair of the Appointment Committees.

«We want to offer the best possible conditions to our researchers. This includes supporting their partners in finding their way in their careers in Switzerland.»
